

PSC 101.005
Introduction to American Politics
Summer, 2007

Dr. Steven Parker
Office: Wright Hall B208; 895-3710
E-Mail parkers@unlv.nevada.edu

SYLLABUS

This course will examine the numerous activities and institutions of American government. In the process, we will be looking at both what the government does and how it does it. Our major focus will be upon the main processes by which decisions are made and policies adopted. At certain stages of the decision-making process, special interest groups and political parties are significant actors, while at other times the lead may be taken by the President or by a Congressional committee.

- PSC 101 satisfies the UNLV Constitution requirement.
- Your grade for this course will be based on the results of two examinations (45% each) and upon the quality of your class participation (10%). While attendance normally counts for just this 10% the professor reserves the right to increase its value up to 50% if necessary deal with cases of chronic absence, etc. Quizzes may also be given.
- Regarding Make-up exams: If you can prove the existence of an urgent and legitimate reason, you may qualify to take a make-up exam. All makeups will be given during the last week of class.

The books required (for purchase) for this course are as follows:

- Patterson, The American Democracy, 8th Edition
- Fife and Patterson, Study Guide To Accompany The American Democracy, 8th Edition
- APS, Introduction to American Government – Student Workbook
- Bowers, The Sagebrush State, Third edition

