

The Case for a New College Governance Structure in Nevada: Integrating Higher Education with Economic Development

Magdalena Martinez, Ph.D., The Lincy Institute

David F. Damore, Ph.D., Department of Political Science, UNLV

Robert E. Lang, Ph.D., Brookings Mountain West and The Lincy Institute

May 2014

The Case for a New College Governance Structure in Nevada provides a governance model that integrates higher education with economic development. Specifically the authors, in response to a call for recommendations by the Committee to Conduct an Interim Study Concerning Community Colleges (SB 391), propose a governance model that is evidence-based and constitutionally sound to achieve Nevada's economic development goals. The authors propose a separate tier of governance for two- and four-year colleges.

The complete policy brief is available at <http://www.unlv.edu/sites/default/files/50/LincyInstitute-TheCaseForANewCollegeGovernanceStructureInNevada.pdf>

The policy brief DOES NOT propose:

- any existing public college and university be dismantled;
- two- and four-year colleges be put under the exclusive control of municipal or county governments;
- local resources replace funding from the state general fund for any existing public college or universities; nor
- the creation of a larger administrative bureaucracy than presently exists.

The policy brief DOES propose:

- to maintain the constitutionally created Board of Regents of the University of Nevada to provide governance exclusively for UNLV, UNR and DRI;
- the creation of Assembly and Senate Higher Education committees to provide oversight and funding for all public higher education;
- a two-tier structure that extends Nevada's GOED framework, specifically the restructuring of the current higher education state agency (Nevada System of Higher Education) to include instead:
  - the creation of the University of Nevada System Office (UNSO) to provide administrative support for the Board of Regents of the University of Nevada and
  - the creation of the Nevada Office of Higher Education (NOHE) to coordinate individual boards for two- and four-year state colleges;
- the Legislature appoint members to governance boards for two- and four-year state colleges (one board per college), including one student representative for each board; and
- college governance boards can hire and fire presidents and shape college priorities and workforce alignment.

It is a budget neutral recommendation and recommends that the current higher education state agency be restructured as UNSO and NOHE. These agencies would provide administrative support to the appropriate college governing boards.