Starting a Writing Circle: Or, How to Insure Consistent Progress in Your Writing

Thursday, February 14, 2013, 3:00-4:00 pm.

Location: Lied Library, Graduate Student Commons

- Do you have specific writing projects (large or small) that you can't quite get started? Or keep moving forward?
 - Are you having difficulty establishing consistent writing habits?
 - Would feedback from peers motivate you to write regularly?

If you face these or other writing challenges, a writing circle may be the strategy for you!

This workshop will introduce the concept of writing circles, suggest ways that writing circles can operate, and elicit your writing needs to begin the process of forming compatible writing support groups.

Conducted by Rachelle Weigel, Research & Education Division, University Libraries.
Presented by the University Libraries and the Graduate College in collaboration with the Consortium for Faculty Professional Opportunities (CFPO).
