Welcome

Mission Statement
The Social Science Methods Certificate Program aims to expand the breadth and depth of methodological training available to UNLV graduate students in the social sciences. The Certificate Program provides advanced interdisciplinary methodological training for graduate students in relevant disciplines. This program encompasses the full range of empirical social science methods and is interdisciplinary by design. Students will gain a broad understanding of the role and forms of method and methodology in the social sciences. Students will gain expertise in the methods most relevant to their research, both in and outside their discipline. An interdisciplinary perspective is emphasized, allowing students the opportunity to make connections with and draw upon the methods and methodologies of other social science traditions. The Certificate Program offers a certification for UNLV graduate students who complete 15 credit hours of advanced graduate research methods courses in the social sciences, at least three credits of which are taken outside of their home department. The Certificate Program is housed in the College of Liberal Arts, but participation is open to graduate students in other UNLV colleges.

Purpose
The purpose of this handbook is to provide program specific information that is not found in the UNLV Graduate Catalog. Students are responsible for understanding and following the policies and procedures delineated in this document and the UNLV Graduate Catalog, as well as the NSHE Code, UNLV Bylaws, and the UNLV Student Conduct Code. Questions about policies should be directed to the Graduate College: valarie.burke@unlv.edu or GradAssociateDean@unlv.edu.

Certificate Program Benchmarks

The Plan of Study

One of the key components of the Certificate Program is the Plan of Study. When the student applies for the program, a Proposed Plan of Study (PPS) form must be submitted. The student and their advisor should take care in assembling this PPS. The Certificate Program website has a list of courses that may be relevant to the student's research methods training needs. This list is not intended to be inclusive. When developing the PPS, the student and their advisor should consider the following points:

1. The "Core Discipline Methods Coursework I" requirement will typically be the required introductory methods/research design course. The student should already have completed this course before applying to the program.
2. The "Core Discipline Methods Coursework II" requirement will typically be another required introductory course in the student's graduate program.
3. The "Elective Methods Courses" should be selected so that they do not duplicate the material covered in the Core Discipline Methods Coursework I & II requirements. The intention here is to use electives for advanced courses. These may be courses in the student's home department.
4. The "Outside Department Methods Course Elective" must be taken outside of the student's home department. The list of relevant courses on the Certificate Program website may be helpful in identifying possible outside electives. However, please note that these courses often require very specific prerequisites. Enrollment in courses outside of a student's home department will likely require permission of the instructor. Please note that this is up to the discretion of the instructor. The student may be asked to demonstrate competency prior to admission.
5. The PPS is intended to be the student's roadmap for the Certificate Program. However, many circumstances can result in the need to make adjustments in the Plan of Study. Students should simply consult with their advisors and submit a revised plan of study should such circumstances arise.

Methods Training From Outside UNLV

There are a number of highly reputable programs outside UNLV that provide advanced social science methods training. An important example of such a program is the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR). Each summer, the ICPSR offers a number of high-quality social science methods courses through their Summer Program. Programs like these often allow students to arrange with their home institutions to obtain academic credit for their work at the external program. Should students wish to use ICPSR (or other reputable program) credits to fulfill elective credits for the Certificate Program, it is necessary that these credits be transferred to UNLV. This may involve a UNLV faculty member conducting an independent study or directed readings course with the student, where the faculty member will evaluate the student's work for the external program and assign credit UNLV credit. If a student wishes to pursue an option like this, the home department Graduate Coordinator should contact the Certificate Coordinator to discuss these options.

Social Science Methods Colloquium Participation

The Social Science Methods Certificate Program will be sponsoring a Colloquium Series. The Colloquium Series will consist of several presentations each year by affiliate faculty members, invited speakers, and Certificate Program students. Although participation is not required, students are strongly encouraged to present their research at the Colloquium. Each year, the Certificate Coordinator will give Certificate Program students an opportunity to sign up for a presentation slot. These presentations may be co-sponsored by other departments, colleges, units, or speaker series.
Professional Code of Ethics/Discipline Guidelines
UNLV Graduate College policy regarding academic integrity can be found in the graduate catalog.

The Certificate Program has high expectations of its students, among which are adherence to standards of integrity. Students are expected to do their own work, oral and written, honestly. To this end, students should be familiar with the statement on the subject in the Graduate Catalog.

UNLV also requires all members of the university community to be familiar with the honor code and to follow copyright and fair use requirements. Students are individually and solely responsible for violations of copyright and fair use laws. UNLV will neither protect nor defend students nor assume any responsibility for violations of fair use laws. To familiarize yourself with copyright and fair use policies, visit the UNLV copyright Web page.

One aspect of integrity is providing adequate citations in written work. The Certificate Program does not have one required format for citations, although professors may impose such a requirement in their courses.

Annual Review Procedures
Each winter break and early spring term, graduate students are required to complete the Graduate Student Individual Development Plan (IDP) form. The review covers the prior calendar year and assesses student progress, and it establishes reasonable goals for the year ahead. Reported student data is shared with students’ graduate coordinators and advisors to foster opportunities for discussion about students’ strengths and weaknesses, accomplishments and next requirements, and mentoring plans so that students know what they need to do in order to progress successfully through their programs in a timely manner. Students who are graduating are also required to complete the form in order to record their achievements since the data is also used to track metrics related to the annual productivity of all students. This survey will be sent by the Graduate College to the student’s Rebelmail account. The review covers the prior calendar year and assesses student progress while setting goals for the year ahead.

Probation
If a student fails to successfully progress in their degree program, their department/school will recommend that the student be placed on probation by the Graduate College. Students on probation may be dismissed/separated from their program for failing to successfully meet the conditions of their probation by the deadline provided. Please see the Probation and Separation section of the Graduate Catalog for more information.
