A major in real estate gives the student a unique background in urban planning and land use regulation, real estate law, real estate finance, real estate investments, and appraisal. Since Las Vegas is the fastest-growing urban center in the western hemisphere, real estate development in this environment requires a dynamic application of business principles. Advanced courses in real estate law, property and liability insurance, real estate brokerage, securities and syndications, income property appraisal, and construction technologies are available as upper-division real estate electives. Interaction with the School of Architecture, community governments, contractors and developers is encouraged.
