

FELLOWSHIPS

ABOUT

Awarded to the best and brightest, fellowships provide significant financial support to graduate students, usually at the doctoral level. Graduate fellowships generally cover tuition, fees, student health insurance, and provide a stipend. This allows the fellow to focus on their own research, scholarship, or creative activity, freeing them up from work and promoting timely degree progression.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITY

- Fellowships are a minimum of $15K per year, but may be higher. The suggested rate is at least $20K plus funds for tuition/fees (approximately $8K more).
- Fellowships are generally awarded to doctoral students, but may be extended to master's students.
- Fellows will receive a non-resident tuition waiver.
- Fellowships do not require work unless the student expressly chooses to do so as part of their own research/scholarship/creative activity to complete their degree requirements.
- Summer fellowships may be awarded to graduate students during the summer months, covering tuition and providing a small stipend. Summer fellowships generally range from $4K for master's students to $7K for doctoral students.
