Don't miss out on GPSA Funding Opportunities GPSA Research and Conference Travel Sponsorships

By Patrick Daleiden, GPSA Vice President & Sponsorship Committee Chair

This is a reminder that there are two upcoming deadlines for GPSA Sponsorship funding. Applications for the Summer Cycle (activities between 5/14/17 and 8/27/17) are due on March 15th and applications for the Fall Cycle (activities between 8/28/17 and 12/16/17) are due on April 15th. All graduate and professional students are eligible for up to $1,250 per year (which resets after the Summer Cycle). Please be aware there are limited funds for each sponsorship cycle and it's a competitive process. But, in the past year 85% of sponsorship applications have been at least partially funded, so be sure to apply if you have a qualifying activity. The Sponsorship committee reads dozens of applications each cycle and would like to note that the difference between high quality and low quality applications is readily apparent. Follow the guidelines on the GPSA Sponsorship website and be sure to include a full budget with comparable and cost supportive supplemental documentation.

There has been some concern about the early date for the Fall applications (April 15), but with a little advanced planning, most students can easily make the deadline. The

Sponsorship rules allow you to apply for travel funding for a conference prior to your acceptance, or even submission of a paper, so if you plan to attend or are thinking about attending an event, you can get provisionally awarded based on whether you receive acceptance to your selected conference. In cases that are genuine emergencies (as outline in the application's guidelines), you may apply for emergency funding by the 20th of every month, although there are less funds allocated for emergency applications in general, so it is usually better to make the main cycle deadline if you can.

If you have any question, please contact Patrick Daleiden GPSA Vice President/ patrick.daleiden@unlv.edu and Chair of the Sponsorship Committee or Rebecca Boulton/ rebecca.boulton@unlv.edu, GPSA Manager.

Need funding for your research project or to attend a conference??

Graduate & Professional Student Association (GPSA) funding information and application is available on the GPSA website.

For research and conference travel activities during Summer 2017. Application deadline: March 15, 2017

For research and conference travel activities during Fall 2017. Application deadline: April 15, 2017

 Also available are emergency funds, for research travel and conference travel (must be presenting). Applications are due the 20th of each month. Check the GPSA website to see if you qualify.

- The Center for Social Justice - Houssels House
- Jean Nidetch Women's Center - SSC-A, Room 255
- Student Recreation and Wellness Center - Rebel Wellness Zone (second floor)

- UNLV/CSUN Preschool
- Boyd School of Law - BSL, Room 210. Please go to BSL, Room 211 for access to the room
- Lied Library - Space may be reserved in Lied Library when other, dedicated lactation spaces are not available — for instance on evenings, weekends, and holidays

The Infamous Academic Search

By: Kirk Askia Talib-deen, GPSA Secretary and Publications Chair

As a PhD student and graduate assistant, I have been privileged to sit on several search committees organized by different departments. During many of these proceedings, potential candidates initially introduce themselves, share their history and backgrounds, and equally important, they present their theories and academic philosophies in their respected fields. Following this part of the interview, the educator—in most cases—demonstrates how they usually approach the classroom space and performs an activity in front of their audience. The beauty of this process is, first and foremost, the educational aspect: Many of us if not most hope or expect to be in that situation in the near future—for some, a bit later; and equally important, it gives the student—and maybe the observing professors—an idea of what level of rigor or thoroughness, is expected of academics. If one ever has an opportunity to sit on a search committee, in order to participate in the academic culture, take part in the process of becoming a Tier One university, or just to witness part of the process to become tenured, take a break in your schedule and enjoy it. See your department for upcoming searches.

Why a Community Garden???

Christain Seabrook, Department of Economics GPSA Representative

UNLV's self-described "Community Garden" is an initiative designed for you, the people. Per the UNLV website, the Community Garden is intended to "create a sense of community, learning and sustainability among students, faculty and staff through the common goal of producing 100 percent organic, natural harvests." The soil will be tilled by students and faculty alike and plots are distributed on first come first serve basis. If you have ever woken from a dream of dirt stained palms plucking bulbous-fleshy tomatoes off the vine, then longed to return to sleep, this may be for you.

The Community Garden isn't new, although many are hearing of it for the first time. It existed in years past, inconsistent management internal politics tainted its development; it was cast aside. Until Elissa Lafranconi inquired about it near her graduation. During her time as a student at UNLV Elissa volunteered at the Community Garden and felt strongly about its positive value. So much so, she created a petition, garnered signatures, that led to meeting with University President Jessup. The university leadership recognized her passion for the project so they offered her the opportunity to run it. This Rebel with a cause brought something worthwhile back to the UNLV community.

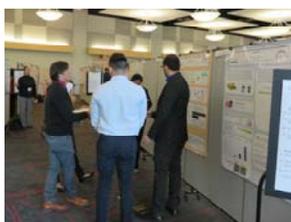

The near future will bring an associated monthly farmers market, bringing together different departments on campus with third party vendors and educators. There are plans for a monthly culinary event that is sure to highlight the garden-to-table message. These efforts will earn money, which funnels back into the program itself and the UNLV community. Environmentally and economically sustainable is a model we, as students of our generation, are grasping for. The stage is set for conversations about environmental issues, the role of food producers, culinary creativity, and so much more. All we have to do is show up, and lend a hand.

Elissa can be reached at elissa.lafranconi@unlv.edu

Graduate & Professional Student Research Forum - April 8, 2017

Poster Session

The Graduate and Professional Student Research Forum is an annual event for students across campus to come together and share their research with fellow students and faculty. Students can present their research either as a poster or in an oral presentation. This provides an opportunity for students to practice presenting for future conferences in a professional setting. The Forum is open to all graduate and professional students at UNLV. This year the GPSA has allocated $160,000 to fund students for research and conference travel. Any graduate and/or professional student who has received GPSA funding for the 2016-2017 year are required to present at the Forum. Awards for outstanding presentations are announced at the end of the event. Faculty are also encouraged to attend to support their students research and to see other research being conducted campus-wide.

All Research Forum participants check-in the morning of the event

- This year's Graduate and Professional Student Research Forum will be held on April 8th on the second floor of the Student Union Building.
- To register or to get more information about the event visit the GPSA's website at <http://gpsa.unlv.edu/forum/>.
