This dynamic course on the Progressive Era (1900 to 1920) begins with an exploration of the preludes to Progressivism, with particular emphasis on the crisis-ridden 1890s and the connections between Populism and Progressivism. This sets the stage for a collaborative research project in Special Collections about the 1908 presidential election. The final part of the course focuses on death, taxes, and the uncertain legacy of the Progressive Era.
