

The International Center for Gaming Regulation

The world's leading international gaming regulation research and education entity.

UNLV hosts the only academic institute in the world dedicated to the study of highly regulated industries with an emphasis on casino and online gaming, The International Center for Gaming Regulation (ICGR). The ICGR specializes in research, executive education, advisory practices and developing leadership councils that routinely assess and make recommendations to improve international gaming regulations.

We have an international scope and specialize in sports betting and tribal matters.

In addition to the primary services, the ICGR offers Gaming Regulators International Policy (GRIP) Summits to provide a five-day immersive seminar focused on specific regions of the world: Europe, Asia/PAC, and North America.

Education

The ICGR's Educational Seminars focus on bringing the world's best and brightest practitioners to teach and engage with industry professionals who want to gain a broad and deep education in regulatory matters.

Research

The ICGR facilitates independent, evidence-based research on issues that cover the wide-ranging topics surrounding regulated game.

Councils

The ICGR's Thought Leadership Councils (ILCs) create an organized, meaningful, unbiased, and independent structure for stakeholders to exchange strategies and communicate and debate findings and best policy practices.

Advising

Our Advisory Services focus on helping organizations establish and implement best policy and practices for operations relating to regulation, online, and land-based casino gaming.
