Graduate Study Information

Graduate education can provide an exciting learning experience, providing thought-provoking challenges during your coursework and through collaborative interactions with your peers and instructors.

To ensure your graduate education is a positive experience, read the rules and regulations pertaining to your graduate studies.

It is your responsibility to know and observe all regulations and procedures relating to your graduate program, the Graduate College, and UNLV. Regulations and deadlines will not be waived or altered based on a plea of ignorance, nor an assertion that your graduate program, the Graduate College, or UNLV did not inform you about the regulations or procedures necessary for progression and commencement.

Using the links copied below, familiarize yourself with the student conduct code. As a graduate student, the university expects you to set the bar at a high level, and to be an example for others to emulate.

Role of the Advisor

Prior to being accepted into the program, you will be assigned a graduate advisor who will help plan your graduate program. With this advisor, you are responsible for developing your graduate program of study and selecting an advisory committee. The committee must consist of a committee Chair, two additional faculty members from Kinesiology & Nutrition Sciences, and one faculty member from any department at UNLV.

Your advisor will evaluate your progress at the end of each semester. You may, at any time, request a meeting with your advisor to discuss any issues, problems, or concerns. We strongly encourage you to communicate with your advisor on a regular basis.
Opportunities

Many exciting opportunities are available through your graduate coursework that will enhance your educational experience. Be sure to discuss these opportunities with your advisor, faculty, and your peers. The more involved you become, the more enhanced your graduate experience will be.

To enhance the quality of your graduate education, the Department of Kinesiology & Nutrition Sciences suggests that you:

- Consult with your advisor on a frequent basis.
- Volunteer to assist your peers with research projects or theses.
- Volunteer to assist your advisor with research projects.
- Volunteer to assist with university activities and community events.
- Volunteer to assist the Graduate and Professional Student Association.
- Attend professional, discipline-related meetings and conferences.
- Join a professional, discipline-related organization.
