

Psychology Research Activity – Student Handout

In Psychology classes, students are exposed to the results of scientific experiments. For students to better understand how these results were obtained, the UNLV Department of Psychology requires that all PSY 101 students have a direct experience with psychological research.

PSY 101 students are required to earn a minimum of 6 research credits (NOTE: at least 3 credits must be completed by the semester halfway point). For other courses, check with your instructor to see if credit is required or if bonus credits are allowed. Credits are earned by participating in experiments, writing summaries of approved articles, or a combination of both. Unfortunately, due to ethical concerns, if you are under 18 years of age you may not participate in experiments (you can complete article summaries).

YOU MUST REGISTER WITH THE SONA SYSTEMS WEBSITE TO RECEIVE CREDIT FOR YOUR COURSE!! Please register as soon as possible.

Experiments

- Experiments vary in the number of research credits awarded (0.5 – 9 credits)
- All responses and measurements of performance in experiments are kept confidential
- For online experiments, please record the URL (web address) of the experiment
- Please give at least 12 hours notice to cancel an appointment (do this on the Sona Systems website or by contacting the experimenter for that experiment)
- Appointments are easier to obtain at the beginning of the semester than at the end

Article Summaries

- Only those articles on the article summary form (on the Subject Pool website – see the web address at the bottom of this page) may be used
- Use the library to locate and download an article, read the article, and then complete the article summary form from the Subject Pool website
- Use YOUR OWN WORDS (plagiarism will be reported for disciplinary action)
- Each satisfactory article summary is worth 1 research credit - summaries submitted at the deadline that are unsatisfactory will not be permitted to be re-submitted after the deadline

The research activity is MANDATORY for PSY 101. If you do not complete the 6-credits, your course grade will be reduced by a letter grade. Deadlines are listed on the Subject Pool website (NO EXCEPTIONS!). If you dispute your final credit tally, you have until 12 PM on Friday of the last week of classes (the last week of classes; not Final Exam week) to resolve the situation.

HOW TO REGISTER

1. Go to the Psychology Homepage at <http://www.unlv.edu/psychology/sona> to get to the Subject Pool website
2. Click “SONA” and request a new account to set up your login and password.
3. At this point, you can begin participating in experiments and/or completing article summaries
