You can change the grading basis for your class to S/U (based on your originally posted grade) through MyUNLV. Changing your grade to an S/U will remove the course from GPA and grade point balance calculations. Courses with S/U grades will still be counted as an “attempt” which may impact the number of times you can take the class in the future, and may have impacts on your financial aid. Courses with S/U grading may not be acceptable for degree requirements, or professional schools and some courses are ineligible based on your major or program. You should speak with your Academic Advisor about the impacts of an S/U grade before changing your grade basis.

1. Click on the View Grades tile on the Rebel Student Homepage

2. Select the term you would like to request an S/U grade for 3. You will see a list of your classes and the grades that have been posted
   a. If the class is not eligible for S/U grading it will be stated next to the grade
   b. You can only request S/U grading for classes that have a letter grade posted
