

A UNLV SOCIOLOGY COMMITMENT

The UNLV Department of Sociology is committed to an inclusive, civil society that protects free dialogue and is open to all viewpoints, as long as they respect others' rights, integrity, and dignity. Alarmed by recent incidents of racism and xenophobia on university campuses, we reaffirm our determination to create a safe learning environment that welcomes people of all backgrounds and perspectives, and gives everyone a chance to flourish. We encourage all students, staff, and faculty to share your concerns, to report instances of incivility, to mobilize necessary resources, and to stand fast in the face of intimidation. The Department of Sociology strongly commits to Title 4, Chapter 8, Section 1 of the Board of Regents Handbook, which states that there shall be no difference in the treatment of persons because of race, religion, color, age, sex, sexual orientation, military status or obligations, disability, or national origin, and that equal opportunity and access to facilities shall be available to all. As always, UNLV sociologists will do their best to illuminate current social conditions, using our knowledge and experience to guide the learning process and foster an equitable and just society.