IV. CRITERIA CONSIDERED BY SELECTION COMMITTEE

- A. General: Nominees must have demonstrated extraordinary qualities as a teacher and a scholar, must have achieved recognition in his or her field of study on an international and national scale, and must have a record of significant service to his or her discipline, to the University, and to the wider community. It is recognized that excellence can be demonstrated differently among the many academic disciplines at UNLV.
- B. Teaching: Nominees will be expected to have a highly successful and meritorious record as a teacher. He or she must have directed theses and/or dissertations, if such are required for graduate degrees in his or her area of study, and must have earned a reputation as a competent director of student research or creative activity. A nominee should be known for service to students as a willing and valued counselor and advisor.
- C. Scholarly Activity: Nominees will be expected to have demonstrated superiority in scholarly research/creative activity in his or her field. Examples include but are not limited to publication with major presses of one or more books in the field that are recognized widely as significant contributions to knowledge, publication of articles in leading scholarly or professional journals with substantial impact, successful grant applications if applicable to his or her field, and by presentation of the products of his or her research/creative activity before national or international meetings of learned societies. Nominees must demonstrate that this work has had a measurable impact on his or her discipline.
- D. Professional Service: Nominees will be expected to have contributed services to his or her discipline by active participation in scholarly and professional societies, by serving on panels and committees of such organizations, by selection for office or similar activities, and by selection as a reviewer or referee by respected scholarly publications. More important, a candidate will be expected to have made numerous and significant contributions in service to the University itself, playing a role in making UNLV a stronger institution; improving its ability to carry out its mission of research/creative activity, teaching, and service; and helping to advance its Top Tier goals. Additionally, in those academic areas in which more direct service to the state or to the public may be performed (such as business research, drug education, clinical testing, etc.), participation in such programs will be considered a significant factor in evaluating nominees. In other words, the commitment must be a true one: to the discipline, to the University, and to the wider community.

The selection committee will consist of current Distinguished Professors and senior academic leaders at the University. The nominees and awardee(s) will be notified of the decision via email by March 31, 2021. The award recipient(s) will be recognized at the Academic Achievement Awards Ceremony (virtual) on April 20, 2021.
